

▲ “I would like to thank the heroes of America. The civilians on the planes that knowingly gave their lives to thwart further atrocity in the attacks; and to the heroes after — who have stood up and reacted to danger — from buses and airplanes to incidents we have not heard of, all to also thwart potential future attacks. To the everyday citizens all over who have given of their time and money to help those they have never met, but are our brothers and sisters. To every fireman, policeman and emergency worker everywhere who give of themselves every day and especially since the attacks upon our country. To every volunteer and charitable organization that have always given of themselves, but more so since the attacks. To every military member and their families who all give of themselves to preserve who we all are — Americans. These people, and every person of America, are the heroes of yesterday, today and tomorrow. They are the people who have reminded us and taught us that we are truly ‘the land of the free and the home of the brave.’ Thank you!”

Submitted by Dean A. Beers, Fort Collins